Strategy and Tactics for Incident Commanders Operating at a Crude Oil Rail Emergency

The New York State Association of Fire Chiefs is conducting a series of workshops in conjunction with CSX, OFPC, and DEC on strategy and tactics for handling a derailment involving crude oil. The workshop is not designed to teach firefighters how to put foam on a fire, but rather provide incident commanders with an overview of the strategies and tactics necessary to operate during the first 15 minutes to eight hours of a crude oil derailment.

The free five-hour workshop for command level staff and supporting officers is funded by a grant from CSX. It will provide students with an understanding of how to build a response plan for large-scale rail responses, including deployment of first alarm resources for their department, mutual aid departments, and other emergency response agencies. It will demonstrate the assignment and coordination of responding fire officers and resources/supporting units to achieve unified command post staffing, rescue/evacuation, exposure protection/suppression, water supply, and foam/environmental operations. It will also provide attendees and subject matter experts an opportunity to exchange information regarding capabilities and available assistance.
